God, grant that today we may be disturbed by some vision of the need for justice or compassion or caring and make this Rotary the channel for renewed life or hope or aspiration for someone down on their luck. Thank you, Lord, for bringing us together and for the rich blessings of this hour. Amen.

Last Week's Speaker: Joseph Callahan by Rich Shimko

Joseph Callahan, our speaker, was introduced as the CEO of Ciright One and as an expert on the "Internet of Things". In case you didn't catch all the technical terms, a device that Joseph's company makes can serve as an illustrative example. The device detects when the Coors tap in bars are pulled and sends messages over the Internet to a Coors computer. That way Coors knows when and where its beer is being used "real-time".

As an innovator, Joseph's opinion that Philadelphia could regain its former role as an innovation leader carries more weight.

He said Philadelphia is the location of the first hospital, stock exchange, and computer. Although innovation is commonly perceived as a young persons' game, Joseph said these youngsters need guidance from more experienced individuals. He may have been tailoring his message to his audience.

Joseph was asked what he thought was the "next big thing". His answer: embedded body monitors, the use of virtual reality in education, and more use of voice and motion to replace touch controls.
